

this pertains to the hearings on dot rules for truckers and the changes you might be considering. It will be interesting if these comments actually make it before a hearing. If they do I would be overwhelmed if I was notified, which I doubt will occur. My feeling is that corporations rule and we the motoring public will have to sacrifice.

I am a truck driver with 10 years verifiable driving experience. I have no accidents and no tickets. Sorry. Seat belt violation in my car in 2002. Prior to that I have been legally driving since I was 16 years old. No accidents but two speeding tickets, one in a school zone at 30 mph and another in a 25 zone at 30 mph. Those while driving a car. I've never had an accident in which I was driving. Now about what the rules need to be...
